Satellite Radio is a service that is paid for by subscribers, how can you possibly limit what they play on their stations. I am traveling two hours a day, and I love the fact that XM is commercial free. If I want to listen to the traffic and weather all I have to do is go to a different station and get the information. Why should I have to switch back and forth between regular radio and satellite radio because you want to take away their right to broadcast? Please reject NAB's petition 04-160. It is wrong to limit what we can hear when we are paying for a service.
